

PLAN TO ENCOURAGE BREEDING PROGRESSES

By J. W. MARCHBANK

When the California State Breeding Bureau is organized an important step in its success will be the selection of stallions as the foundation sires of the highly promising body. Undoubtedly men with a thorough knowledge of blood lines will be called upon to make the "pick" among stock horses available and that is all to the good.

Not so long ago the victory of a galloper by the name of Herrero created quite a sensation at the Empire City track on the other side of the continent. The horse was a familiar performer at Hunts meets, but the "big time" racegoers knew nothing of him. He proved an easy winner at a big price in the books. What interests me is that Herrero is by the Kentucky Derby winner George Smith, which stood for a number of years at The Jockey Club Breeding Bureau station.

The New Yorkers do not send any "rag tag" representatives of the thoroughbred breed to their Breeding Bureau but animals of the class of the John Sanford bred George Smith. Another well bred progenitor of the New York Breeding Bureau is Harmonicon, a son of the famous Disguise. The Disguise blood is noted for carrying on through its sons, either on the top line or on the distaff side. My King Heather, as is well known, is by Disguise. Herrero, the Empire City victor, is from a daughter of Harmonicon.

When a thing is worth doing at all it is worth doing the right way. That is one of the reasons I am so anxious to see the California State Breeding Bureau off to a good start. The stallions, placed at easily accessible depots in various sections of the state, will be available each breeding season to well bred mares. The mares may come from large establishments or from a farm boasting only of a lone thoroughbred. Who knows, the farmer may rear a winner of the Lassie Stakes at Tanforan, or even one good enough to score in a renewal of the Tanforan Futurity, a race open to the two year olds of the whole world.

Breeding is only getting going again and there could be furnished no better impetus than a State Breeding Bureau. The funds for the purchase of the stock horses and for their maintenance would come from the money turned over to the state government as the state's portion of the pari mutuel wagering at the tracks now operating. The cost would be negligible in comparison to the good that could be accomplished in raising the grade of the performers on California tracks.

TWO ALTERNATIVES--CHEAP MONEY-CHAOS

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

In these hectic times things have come to such a pass that every citizen must make a decision as to whether he is going along with the progressive movement, so well led by President Roosevelt or aligning himself with the backward group, which is bitterly opposed to all the forward-looking plans of the chief executive of the nation, including that of elasticity of currency, or, as it may be termed, cheap money.

Technology demands that the social economy should be re-adjusted; if the adjustment is not made, partially, if not altogether along the lines being worked out by the present national administration, we'll keep going down on the toboggan, that's a certainty.

Experts agree that about five per cent of our so-called money is currency; the other 95 per cent is credit, and as is well known, credit costs at least 7 per cent interest. It is easy enough to see that every time money collects interest, its buying power is diminished by 7 per cent.

I was much interested the other day by an editorial in the Vancouver Sun in which it was graphically set forth that if $100 must pay 7 per cent interest, that leaves only $93 to move goods. On the other hand, if the $100 cost only half of one per cent the balance would be $99.50 to move goods. It could be used 14 times for every once it is used now, at the same cost to the user. Turning over 14 times, it would move nearly $1,400 worth of goods.

Correctly enough, it is pointed out that the United States and Canada, with their advanced technology, can produce the $1400 worth of goods, but the two countries are keeping the buying power down to $93. What the enlightened citizens of the two great nations must learn is to give the consumer the buying power to take the whole $1400 worth. In other words, mass production has been solved by the engineers but mass distribution must be solved for the survival of the present kind of civilization.

Clear reasoning shows money is invested, all right, but has to pay a high interest rate to its owners. In order to reduce costs to pay interest, industry installs labor saving machinery, displaces workers, and reduces payrolls. The fewer workers with reduced payrolls can buy less products of industry; what is not sold, is destroyed, as last year in England 40 million gallons of milk were dumped to keep the prices so that invested money could pay itself the interest it demanded.

We might as well look the facts in the face: machine civilization, our civilization, has engendered two tendencies in economic organization, which one must admit, are becoming irreconcilable. The growth of large scale production, as we all know, has eliminated almost entirely competition from a number of industries. Many business enterprises, no matter how socially minded their executives may be, have failed to pass on the benefit we should naturally expect from technical improvements, that is, lower prices. It is easy to see that under the present set-up, each advance in technique, instead of stimulating production through increased purchasing power, goes to dividend-making stockholders.

The other tendency is for the workers, faced by growing insecurity, to seek regulation of hours and wages and to some extent protection against unemployment.

The clash between the demand for profits, on the one hand, and the demand for security, on the other, is obvious and it is up to such a sagacious leader as the president to find a solution. He is trying with all his might to work out a solution of the old problem of labor and capital, made peculiarly acute in a machine age, and as we said last week, let's put him back in office for another four years to finish the job.

Thank You So Much! We Won't Have To Pay

Council Maneuvers City Out Of Bad Spot--It's Hoped Everybody May Now Save Their Dough.

The colorful and brilliant bubble is about to explode.

The Colonel (?) and his sweethearts have magnanimously agreed to absolve the City of Daly City and its council from all responsibility arising from the latter's granting of a permit to establish a "Bingo" parlor in our community.

At Monday evening's meeting of the city council (which lasted until nearly 12 o'clock) the city attorney reported his opinion regarding the abrogation of the "Bingo" permit. The city council had granted for an annual license fee of $4000, it being stated one-half of this sum had already been paid into the city treasury.

The official said there was a question as to whether or not those holding this permit were in possession of a vested property right and that the permit might not be revoked without the possibility of liability for recovery from the city for damages.

Be this as it may, it seemed hardly probable that, in view of conviction of those having operated a similar game in Bayshore on a charge of violation of Section 330 of the Penal Code, that an attempt would be made here to again incur possibility of prosecution on the same charge. In the Bayshore case the defendants had

RED CROSS CALL BEING HEEDED BY RESIDENTS HERE

Our Own City, Colma And Lawndale Enthusiastic In Support

With Mrs. H. F. Fellows as local chairman of the drive, the annual Red Cross Roll Call membership campaign got off to a flying start here Armistice Day, November 11.

The campaign will end on Thanksgiving Day.

Miss Helen Chesebrough, county chairman of the drive, was optimistic over the prospects of the Roll Call in Daly City. She said:

"Daly City has always responded to our appeal for funds. It is because the people of this city have recognized the relief work done by the Red Cross in their own community."

"We are ever ready to lend a helping hand to the down and outer. Now it's your turn to help us keep up this good work."

Mayor H. H. Smith issued a public statement in behalf of the drive. He said:

"As Mayor of Daly City I call upon the citizenry of our good community to respond enthusiastically to the appeal of the Red Cross for funds."

"We, in public office, know well the service rendered by the Red Cross. Our own chapter of the organization has relieved the suffering of the needy many times."

"It is no more than fair that we at this time get behind the organization's drive for funds."

In Colma, Mrs. M. P. Brown as chairman of the campaign there is making a record canvass with her assistants of that field while E. A. Weisenberger is heading the campaign in Lawndale and Mrs. John T. Bevans is doing likewise in Lomita Park.

NEW SINGING SHIRLEY TEMPLE TUNEFUL FILM

The happiest picture of Shirley Temple's career, "Curly Top," arrived on Thursday to the screen of the Daly City Theater for three days, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 14, 15 and 16.

In "Curly Top," a charming story of a little girl who captures the heart of a lonely bachelor and makes both their dreams come true, Shirley has two new songs to sing and several new and intricate dance routines for audience approval.

In this Fox Film comedy-drama, John Boles is cast as a bachelor who adopts Shirley and her big sister, Rochelle Hudson. There the romance of Boles and Rochelle Hudson flourishes under the childish guidance of little Shirley who sings, dances and laughs her way into their hearts.

Shirley is really happy in this picture, for she has the opportunity of displaying her full talents when she sings "Animal Crackers in My Soup" and "When I Grow Up."

Shirley is not the only one to sing in this joyful film. John Boles sings "It's All So New To Me" and "Curly Top," while Rochelle Hudson surprises by singing for the first time, "The Simple Things in Life."

Also to be shown "One Frightened Night," with Charles Grapewin and Mary Carlisle.

Ovenserve--Wednesday night.

Amateur night--Sunday.

APPOINTMENT OF JUSTICE OF PEACE IS POSTPONED

Board Of Supervisors Refer Applications To Supervisor Beer For Recommendation.

Appointment of a successor to the late Justice of the Peace Richard O'Farrell, who was killed two weeks ago in an auto crash, was postponed, Tuesday of this week, by the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors pending receipt of a recommendation by the grand jury.

Applications received were referred to Supervisor Beer of San Mateo.

The grand jury members said they were desirous of making certain recommendations before the office is filled.

It is believed the grand jury will recommend consolidation of the justice court with the San Mateo municipal court thus effecting a saving for that city's taxpayers and rental charges to the county.

Mayor Frank Simmen, close associate of Supervisor Fred Beer, however, offered the first snag to this proposed saving to taxpayers.

When interviewed the mayor said whether the recommendation of the grand jury would be accepted depended entirely on who the board appointed to succeed Judge Farrell.

By those close to the situation it is believed that Mayor Simmen is attempting to engineer into the appointment City Judge Arthur Stetson of San Mateo.

This seemed apparent in the mayor's statement to the effect that the city had no intention of dispensing with Judge Stetson's services.

Beer and Mayor Simmen are known to be close associates and it is believed that since the appointment rests with the San Mateo supervisor, Stetson is slated for the job.

Other developments at Tuesday's board meeting were as follows:

1--Montara residents asked the board to aid in the creation of a sewer maintenance district. This would pave the way for use of PWA funds for sewer construction.

The board set November 25 as the date for a public hearing on the issue.

2--Urban S. Marshall, county engineer, urged all unincorporated areas to take advantage of the WPA funds available for sewer construction.

3--At request of Supervisor Al Witt the board instructed County Manager Kellogg to have drafted WPA sewer project plans. This will relieve the burden of taxation from the taxpayers.

Witt was also instrumental having the board instruct Kellogg and Coordinator William Hendricks to appeal to the WPA for payment of the union wage scale to county workers.

AUTHOR BENNET EXAMINES LOCALE OF HIS NEW YARN

"Caught in the Wild" Appears Serially in This Newspaper.

Robert Ames Bennet believes in gathering authentic information about the country in which he lays the plots for his stories. He is shown below exploring ice formations in the far north, which forms the background for his latest adventure story, "Caught in the Wild," which appears serially in this newspaper.

Robert Ames Bennet.

Bennet was born in Denver in 1870, when that city's population numbered only 5,000. With his family he traveled much of the West and before he was seven had seen two gold camp shootings. Although he attended public schools for a short time he is largely a self-educated man. After two years of law school he began the practice of law with his father and brother.

Since 1907 he has devoted all of his time to writing, having become a popular figure with lovers of good books and readers of magazines throughout the country because of the vibrant, exciting quality of his 30 or more novels.

"Caught in the Wild," hailed by many critics as his best, is the story of a prospector and three tenderfeet, two of them dangerous crooks and one a spoiled young woman, trapped in the north woods when their plane crashed. You'll find it one of the most exciting stories in years, if you follow it serially in the columns of this newspaper.

The proceeds will be devoted to their annual Christmas Tree Fund. Thursday, November 21, is the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Associated Aerics. This meeting will be held in Eagles Hall, Daly City, that evening.

Last Saturday night Mr. and Mrs. Bob Wall entertained Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wettstein at a dinner and bridge party at their home on Evergreen avenue.

The members of La Fiesta Club were entertained recently at a pajama party given by Mrs. Lorraine Wall at her home on Evergreen avenue.

The Daly City Tanforan baseball team will play the Bear Photos at the Club House Diamond, Seventh and Bryant streets, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Joseph Hines, 20, of Niantic avenue was taken to the Villa Sanatorium for treatment, Saturday of last week, after he had swallowed ant poison at his home. The young man is said to have quarreled with his parents.

CROCKER P. T. A. FATHERS NIGHT

An exceptionally interesting meeting was held by Crocker Parent Teachers Association, Tuesday evening of this week, in General Pershing School. The president, Mrs. Bernadine Lewis, presided. The occasion was Fathers Night, and a large group of Dads were present.

After a short business meeting, during which Mrs. Orville D. Pauw was appointed auditor in place of Mrs. A. Howe, whose resignation was regrettably accepted, Crocker responded to the Red Cross roll call with a generous donation.

The date of the bazaar was set for December 6. Mrs. Walker reported the sewing as progressing. Mrs. C. Anderson reported several new members and that her membership quota is rapidly approaching the goal.

The meeting was turned over to the program chairman, Mrs. G. Katch. E. R. Bradford, scout master of Troop 47, was introduced and gave an interesting talk on the "Underprivileged Boy and Scouting in Relation to Character Building," which was enjoyed by the mothers as well as the dads.

Mrs. J. F. Walker gave a talk on the Parent Teacher magazine and explained its necessity in Parent Teacher work.

The Boys Glee Club of Crocker School surprised every one by appearing in cowboy outfits. They sang three songs of the range, with Miss Mosconi directing and accompanying them on her accordion. The Girls Glee Club also sang three beautiful selections, with Miss Mosconi acting as accompanist. The parents are always pleased to hear these singing groups and are proud of their progress.

R. L. Crane, superintendent of the Jefferson School District, was introduced as an Eagle Scout and former scout master, and gave a talk on Scout aims and accomplishments. The meeting was then adjourned and "donuts" and coffee were served by Mrs. Davidson and her hospitality committee.

The next executive board meeting will be held at the home of the president, Mrs. Bernadine Lewis, 199 Acton street, on December 3. All sewing must be turned in at that time.

pleaded guilty of the offense and had been fined.

The city attorney, however, said he was of opinion a conference should be sought with the holder of the permit, who is purported to be one J. J. Sullivan of Yountville.

At this juncture an individual in the audience arose, when invited, and said he represented Mr. Sullivan as "manager," and that the holder would be glad to sign a release absolving the city from all claim for damages (?) to him arising from this transaction. This individual stated he would retaliate by "cleaning up this town"—whatever that may mean. On inquiry, he informed the city attorney that he lives at the William Taylor Hotel in San Francisco.

Councilman Fahey moved that the permit heretofore granted to J. J. Sullivan be revoked and cancelled and that the $2000 paid the city be returned to him if and when he had signed and delivered a satisfactory release of any obligation to him by the City of Daly City. The city attorney, by the same motion, was instructed to prepare such release and secure the proper signature. This motion was adopted by a unanimous vote of the council.

A petition was presented, signed by 47 Daly City merchants, protesting against the enactment of any drastic prohibitive fireworks ordinance until such time as they had opportunity to dispose of stocks now on hand. Laid over for further consideration.

The matter of establishing a civil service system for employees of Daly City was referred to the city attorney for investigation and report.

A letter from the County Chapter of the American Red Cross requested a contribution. The council donated the sum of $10.

Peter Pavlos, representing the Daly City Merchants Association requested the city council to co-operate in securing a change of the method of parking on Mission street from parallel to diagonal. This will be taken up with the State Highway Commission by the two bodies jointly. It was also suggested that the council fix a parking limit in the business districts. Referred to the chairman of the ordinance committee. Complaint was made as to excessive speed of automobiles passing through the business section.

It was decided to appoint a plumbing inspector and a deputy—Mr. Riddell and Mr. Hopman being appointed to the respective positions. Mayor Smith asked permission to erect a board sign, 10 by 16 feet, at Westlake and Junipero Serra, to advertise the Mission Auto Court. This was granted by the council.

The council having heretofore empowered the mayor to purchase a car for the police department, he stated he had not done so and asked to be relieved of the task. On motion of Councilman Selmi, the council voted four to one to purchase a Chevrolet automobile equipped with radio, etc. Councilman Fahey voted against the motion, stating his belief that other car should be taken into consideration before purchase was made.

An ordinance repealing the "Bingo" ordinance was introduced and read by title.

The council adjourned to meet in regular session Monday evening, November 25.

The mayor and city officials of Petaluma met the boys at the station and escorted them through the town to scout headquarters.

The boys then attended games and paraded through the city.

CO-OP MEETING AT CITY HALL

Because we are living in the machine age and cannot disregard the fact that modern machinery is yearly putting more men out of work. Professor F. Rivers of Berkeley, member of the Northern California Co-operative Council, made machinery and the present conditions the keynote of his interesting talk to the members and friends of the New Era Co-op, Inc. at their regular monthly meeting held in Daly City Hall, last Friday evening.

"Statistics show," said Professor Rivers, "that in 1904, in the automobile business, it took 1291 hours to accomplish the same amount of work that was done in 33 hours in 1933. At present 10 per cent of industry is done by labor while 90 per cent is performed by machinery."

Though ripe in years, the wiry professor is exceedingly young in ideas. Out of the richness of his past experiences, he gave his listeners many entertaining incidents from his own life.

With eyes sparkling with the enthusiasm of purpose, Professor Rivers stressed the fact that "co-operation" is the one thing that will better the conditions of today. "People must be educated to the value of co-operative buying," stated the professor (who is at present giving all his spare time to lecturing to groups throughout the bay cities). People must be educated to the fact that buying through a Co-operative system means economic security.

SUDDEN DEMISE OF FORMER RESIDENT

The many friends of Angelo Briseole, better known as Chick, were shocked to learn of his sudden death, Monday evening of this week. Chick had complained to his wife that he felt ill, and a few minutes later he passed away, the victim of a heart attack.

For the past five months the Briseole family have resided on Thirty-seventh avenue in San Francisco. For many years prior to that time they resided on Mirian street in Daly City.

Deceased is survived by his widow, Lillian Briseole, a brother, Louis Briseole, and three sisters, Mrs. Matilda Moody, Mrs. Natalia Betancue and Mrs. Laura Williamson.

The funeral services were conducted from a San Francisco undertaking establishment.

CHAPTER I

The Chechacos.

Garth knelt upon the planks of the small floating wharf to fasten a pitch-smeared patch on the bottom of his upturned birchbark canoe. In the midst of his work he paused to listen. A faraway drone was just audible above the ting and hum of insects. He turned to peer at the southerly sky above the vast flood of the Mackenzie. The drone became more distinct.

A plane was coming downriver towards the emergency refueling station at the old abandoned trading post. Yet the regular schedule of the line did not call for the northbound Belanca for several days. In all probability, the Commercial Airways had sent out its emergency plane from Fort McMurray, Alberta.

Though his thoughts lingered on the approaching plane, his eyes and hands returned to the patching of the canoe. The craft must be made ready for the weeks of upriver paddling. There would be none too much time for the thousand-mile trip out before the winter freeze-up.

As he finished the patch the loud drone of the motor swelled into a staccato roar. He turned to watch the white monoplane swoop down and take the water like a squatting duck. The pilot started to taxi shoreward. Garth again set about patching the small leak. A sudden silence told that the motor had been stilled. Across the hush came a curt order:

"Ho, Jack, fend off and snub her."

Garth leisurely twisted around to eye the incoming craft. She was a beautiful medium-sized plane with a cabin behind the semi-enclosed cockpit. Between her headway and the river current, she was driving towards the upstream side of the wharf at a speed that promised to smash the pontoons.

Yet neither of the two helmeted persons in the cockpit made a move to climb down in readiness to ward off the shock. Nor did either work the controls to reverse the craft clear. Both were hastily putting on headnets and gloves to protect themselves from the outbursting swarms of mosquitoes and bulldog flies. They seemed to take for granted that the worker on the wharf would rush to give them service.

In the North abode of men are supposed to wait upon themselves. More, the pilot's tone had been that of a master commanding an inferior. Garth stayed motionless, waiting for the crackup with cool curiosity.

At that the smaller person cried out in a sharp, almost shrill voice: "Quick, you yawping dummy!"

The fact that one of the pair was a woman made a vast difference. Garth caught the end of the mooring line flung by the pilot, and snatched up a long pikepole. Its outthrust point met the tip of the nearer pontoon.

Bent low, Garth put all of his weight and strength into his angling shove with the pole. The momentum of the ingling plane forced him back one step after another. Then his moccasins found a holding grip against the upturned edge of a plank.

Instead of driving in against the wharf at the blunt angle with which it had approached, the head of the plane began to swing off. With another outburst of strength, Garth swung it parallel with the upstream side of the wharf.

Aided by a slight swerve in the current, he was able to walk the plane to the outer end of the wharf before the nearer pontoon could hit the float logs. As the aircraft glided clear, he made the line fast to a ringbolt and returned to his canoe.

"What the devil!" snapped the pilot. "Come back, you fool. Take in the slack—moor us."

swung around and lay nosing the current. Neither the man or the woman made a movement until Garth drove his canoe ashore and lifted it atop the stony bank.

As he climbed to the front of the old post store, above the base of the wharf, he saw the pilot at last swing down to haul on the line. Inside the big log cabin he crossed to one of the rear rooms and put a light hand on the forehead of the snoring man in the nearest bunk.

"Turn out, Tobin. Visitors."

The grizzle-bearded station tender roused up to blink and peer.

"Visitors? You're not stringin' me, Mr. Garth?"

"No. Rover plane."

Tobin slipped on his moccasins and hobbled out into the storeroom. The pilot had moored his plane head and tail to the lower side of the landing stage. He was handing his woman companion down from the cockpit. Both had replaced their leather flying helmets with hats and mosquito nets.

They went in under the overhanging wing to the screened door of the cabin. It opened to the outthrust of a portly man in city clothes. Assisted by the pilot, he managed to get down upon the wharf by means of steps lowered from inside the cabin. After hurriedly putting on a headnet and gloves, he started inshore between his two companions. He limped as if slightly crippled. But the lameness might have been due to cramp from long sitting.

Garth spoke to the supply tender: "I'm only a stray prospector, Tobin. Understand?"

"Aye, sir," grunted Tobin. Without a word of greeting, he hobbled back a few steps as the pilot and his passengers stepped in over the rough threshold.

The portly man opened a gold-mounted cigar case. The young woman produced a long amber-stemmed cigarette holder. This was promptly filled by the pilot, who paused only to slap a mosquito on his clean-shaven cheek before striking a match.

Out went Garth's hand in a swift clutch that caught the flaming match in his calloused palm. The pilot, who was as tall as Garth and heavier built, turned to stare down at him with cold anger.

"You insolent roughneck! Clear out of here."

Garth smiled. Tobin did the answering: "Hub, crazy loon—lighting matches in here. Can't you read the sign? No smoking." Bounce him, lad."

The pilot thrust a hand inside his leather jacket. "Try it. I'll drill both of you."

"How frightful," said Garth. "You must imagine this is a Wild West show. Please don't shoot until the lady can get outside. Shots are even more apt than matches to explode all this gasoline."

The portly man snapped shut his cigar case.

"That's so! You have no cause to be ruffled, Vivian. The fellow seems to have acted on a well-intentioned impulse."

The pilot's hand came out empty from inside the jacket. "Why couldn't the fool have spoken a warning?"

Garth had sized up the man. He expected neither an apology for the abuse nor thanks for saving the visitors from possible annihilation. With an indifferent smile, he shifted the gaze of his gray eyes to examine the woman member of the party.

A first glance had led him to think her older than the pilot. Under her rouge and powder her face was thin and drawn. Its lines might have belonged to a woman in the mid-thirties. Her blue eyes looked more than bored and cynical. Their tiredness matched the lined face. Her body was thin almost to bonyness.

Yet, upon examination, Garth saw she could not be even in the mid-twenties. Traces of girlish freshness still lingered in her painted face, under the blemishes of dissipation and disillusionment.

As she faced away from him, the pilot spoke to Tobin:

"Get busy. Truck down sixty gallons of gas and five of oil—and be quick about it. While your helper is refueling the plane, you'll cook us the best meal you can throw together."

Down came Tobin's shaggy eyebrows. "Who d'you think you're bossin'? Shove along to a tradin' post for yer grub an' gas. This here cache is the comp'ny's emergency deepo."

The portly visitor took a billfold from his coat and drew out a paper. "Take a look at this order, my man. It authorizes me to requisition any of the Airways' stations for whatever supplies I wish."

Tobin read the order, and thrust it back, with no lessening of his dourness. "So you're Burton Ramill, are you? Looks like a straight order. All the same, you'll sign the book before you'll get a drop."

He turned about to open an oily account book on one of the stacks of gasoline cases. Mr. Ramill drew a fountain pen from his vest pocket with plump white fingers, and limped forward to write.

"There's your receipt," said the pilot. "Now have this dumb helper of yours rush out our gas, and get your pans on the fire. We want service."

"Yuh? Well, you're welcome to want it till doomsday. That comp'ny order calls for supplies. Don't say nothin' about cookin' nor service."

Mr. Ramill interposed: "All right, man. I see you're stiff from rheumatism. I will pay this young fellow to refuel the plane."

Garth turned his cool gaze upon the pilot. "Why not give this bird of yours the chance to earn a little more pay?"

"Because Mr. Huxby has flown my plane all the way from Chicago, with only short stop-overs. Also, he is my partner, not a mechanic."

"Well, he's not the only party present who's not a kiwi," Garth pulled a small poke from inside his buckskin shirt, hefted it as if considering, and put it back. "Nor do I need your pay."

Huxby's supercilious eyes glistened with sudden keen interest. "What's that? You're from the new gold fields?"

"No."

"But your gold sack?"

"Gold?" Garth muttered.

He drew out his poke again and opened it to shake a few small nodules of metal into his palm. Both Huxby and Mr. Ramill stepped close to peer at the grayish silvery bits. The older man looked puzzled. The younger took a nodule into his own palm, eyed it a moment, and handed it back in an indifferent manner.

"Galena. I'm a mining engineer. You're out of luck, not making a gold strike. Never before in history has silver been so low."

Garth looked disappointed. "Too bad, isn't it?"

He picked out a nodule that had been rubbed to a rather bright polish. The girl was leaning with her left hand on one of the lower piles of gasoline cases. A ring with a large blue diamond banded the "engagement" finger. Garth thrust the nodule up close beside the ring.

"Yes," he said. "I always did think gold looked prettier than galena—even white gold."

The girl drew her hand away as if he had smirched it. "My ring is not gold. You pretend to be a prospector. Yet do you know platinum from gold?"

"Platinum?" Garth questioned. "But your friend here calls it galena."

Mr. Ramill interposed: "Permit me. Lillith—Young man, I am largely interested in metalliferous mines. If you have located a lode of galena, the lead might pay for development of the prospect."

"That depends," put in Huxby. "Where's the place?"

"Three weeks—paddle and portage," Garth answered.

"Slow travel. But by airplane?"

"The bird distance can't interest you. Neither lead nor silver would pay for airplane freighting. Nor would packing. I lost ten pounds of this—galena. Canoe upset, running one of the rapids."

As Garth spoke he put up a hand to cover a yawn. "If you don't mind, Tobin, I'll roll in. It's a long travels to Great Slave."

The portly investor in mines caught the eye of his engineer partner. He spoke to Garth: "You are going outside?"

"Perhaps."

"Well, a day or so should make no difference to you. Is there a lake or pond near your prospect?"

"One about four miles long; half as wide."

Huxby repeated his question: "It could be reached how soon by air?"

The fish were no longer nibbling; they were hooked. Garth had only to haul in on his line. But he took his time about it. He paused to consider. Not all fish prove to be desirable catches.

Neither Mr. Ramill nor Huxby looked like a crook. They had the appearance of reputable business men. On the other hand, neither looked easy. Huxby broke in on Garth's weighing of the chances: "Well, Jack, let's have it."

"Two to three hours," Garth replied. "I don't know the speed of your plane."

"Fastest type of cabin cruiser. Call it six hours to go and return, and the same to inspect your prospect. It's possible there may be a trace of gold in your ore. I'll test it while you get your sleep."

The girl spoke to Mr. Ramill: "I shall take a nap myself, Dad. Ten hours of flying, with no chance to dance off the Scotch, is enough to kill a horse."

In the act of handing a nodule to Huxby, Garth paused to stare at the girl. So that was the answer—liquor, tobacco, paint, and all the rest of the flapper-jazz rot.

She stiffened and stared back at him haughtily. He dropped the nodule into Huxby's cupped palm and crossed into the rear room to stretch out on one of the bunks.

A tug at his shoulder roused Garth from his six-hour sleep. Tobin's hoarse voice croaked in his ear:

"Roll out, sir. Sun's up. The pair of 'em are keen to be a-wing. Looks like their test of your nugget livened 'em up. Grub's on."

Garth pulled on his buckskins and moccasins and stepped into the storeroom. Miss Ramill was coming in at the front door. She paused to remove her headnet. Huxby and Mr. Ramill were already putting down a hearty breakfast of bacon, sourdough bread and oatmeal porridge. Garth crowded past them and Tobin to the end of the little shelf table.

Jefferson's Rules

Rules compiled by Thomas Jefferson included: Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today. Never trouble another for what you can do yourself. Never spend your money before you have it. Never buy what you do not want because it is cheap; it will be dear to you. Pride costs us more than hunger, thirst and cold. We never repent of having eaten too little. Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly. How much pain is suffered in evils which have never happened. Take things always by the smooth handle. When angry, count ten before you speak; if very angry, a hundred.

Amazing Juggling Trick

The most amazing juggling performance ever presented on a stage was the billiard-ball-and-cue act of the famous German juggler, Paul Cinquevalli. This feat, which required eight years to perfect, consisted of balancing two balls on the top of a cue, which in turn was balanced on another movable ball in a drinking glass that he held in his mouth.—Collier's Weekly.

Blind Heroes Guided by Wives in Strange Town

A two-hour journey from Belgrade reveals one of the strangest villages in the world, where all the husbands are blind and the work of the colony is directed by the wives who see.

The town of Vetrenik is the first blind war veterans' colony in Yugoslavia, the first in a program of land settlements for the blind undertaken by the government.

The government institute for the blind arranged many marriages for unmarried blind veterans and aids the couples in the settlement at Vetrenik. The men are employed in useful crafts and the household work and operation of the colony are managed by the wives.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"We that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." These words from II Corinthians comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, November 17, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Mortals and Immortals." Included among the Scriptural selections will be: "Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption. . . . For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality" (I Cor. 15: 50, 53).

The following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "We cannot fathom the nature and quality of God's creation by diving into the shallows of mortal belief. We must reverse our feeble flutterings—our efforts to find life and truth in matter—and rise above the testimony of the material senses, above the mortal to the immortal idea of God. These clearer, higher views inspire the God-like man to reach the absolute centre and circumference of his being." (p. 262).

LOCAL HIGH WINS FROM SAN MATEO

Great team work our boys showed at the game with San Mateo, Friday of last week, at San Mateo. San Mateo started off poorly by making a bad kick-off to our team. But our boys made the most of the bad start. After a few minutes, Bolster passed to Burns and we made our first touchdown. Near the end of the first quarter Bolster once more passed to Burns, and Burns made a grand run to the second touchdown. Both conversions were made, making the score 14 to 0.

The starting lineup for San Mateo High was: Baehr and Clarksons, tackles; Ferran and Foss, guards; Brown, center; Muhleman, quarterback; Silva, fullback; Kutzer and Long, halfbacks.

Our Jefferson lineup was: Prongos and Young, guards; Lee and Green, ends; Guisti and Telleria, tackles; Gerstenburg, center; Verducci and Burns, halfback; Pfeiffer, quarterback; Bolster, fullback.

The second string lineup, which played during the second quarter and the last half of the fourth quarter was: Rose, Bontempi, Stansbury, Elder, Lowenthal, W. Wilson, Silicani, Van Pelt, and Biggio.

Toward the end of the first quarter, San Mateo made a safety, making the score thus far 14 to 2.

Our second string lineup was sent in to play at the beginning of the second quarter. The second string played a fine game. There was a moment when, in the second quarter, one of San Mateo's men was running for a touchdown and had a good start, but Rose of the second string made a spectacular run and tackle and saved the day.

It was not until the fourth quarter that our Indians scored once more; that is, they made another safety, which counts as two points.

During the game there were many penalties on both sides for clipping and off sides.

Some outstanding features of the game were: Bolster's passing to Burns; Burns' runs to both touchdowns; Green's conversions; and Rose's kicking, and the tackle during the second quarter, which prevented San Mateo from making a touchdown.

The final score was 16 to 2 in favor of Jefferson Union High School.

Silk Topper Is Doomed;
Few Are Learning Trade

The silk hat, unlike its felt competitors, does not lend itself to mass production, notes a writer in Tit-Bits Magazine. Every "topper" is the skillful creation of several experts working in conjunction, who have served a long apprenticeship to the job. They are body-bakers, trimmers, finishers, and shapers. The body consists of a stiffened calico wound around a cylindrical block, and upon this the brim and top are ironed. The plush cover, cut to graded sizes, is sewn together with a diagonal seam, and placed over the body while hot. As it cools it contracts to a perfect fit. The finisher gives the silk hat its beautiful sheen, and the shaper curls the brim and puts in the lining.

The very fact that the "topper" is the production of experts tends to make its doom even more certain than it would otherwise be, for no youth is likely to enter upon a long apprenticeship to a dying trade, and thus the time will soon come when no one capable of making a silk hat will be left. At the present there remain only a few hundred of such men.

ARMISTICE BALL GREAT SUCCESS

One Of Largest Crowds Ever Seen At Such Affairs Officers Installed

(By W. J. Lehigh)

The Armistice Day Ball on Saturday, November 9, was a great success. Nearly everybody in town was present and a thoroughly good time was had by all. Both the City Auditorium and the Eagles Hall were used for the occasion and both places were taxed to capacity at the height of the festivities.

The committee is to be commended upon the splendid manner in which details were managed.

Mr. H. Irwin of South San Francisco, was the lucky winner of the beautiful silver set which was given as door prize.

The following are the Post officers for the current year: Commander, M. V. Jensen; Senior Vice Commander, J. C. Lewis; Junior Vice Commander, B. J. Sender; Quarter Master-Adjutant, F. R. Linser; Chaplain, C. R. Ireton; Advocate, R. F. Brulez; Officer of the Day, A. Albertus; Surgeon, Dr. F. P. Callen.

The installation of officers on Friday, November 8 (which was an open house meeting), was a notable affair. The officers of both branches of the V. F. W. took their oaths with straight faces and determination to do their best during their term of office. Every seat in the hall was filled and "standing room only" signs were hung out long before the gavel rapped for order.

The gowns of the ladies were gorgeous and Fifth avenue or Parisian modistes would have stared with envy could they have looked on.

Flowers and bouquets of beautiful design were plentiful and were presented to new and past officers during the impressive ceremony.

The men were installed in a very snappy military manner and were in their respective chairs in jig time.

Superior Judge Elmer Robinson of San Francisco gave a fine talk to the outgoing commander and other officers.

The entire affair was not without humor, however, for jiggers and uppers do exist, and when bigger and better commanders are made Old Glory will make them.

Thanks are extended to Hon. Elmer E. Robinson for his willing co-operation for being with us, the Daly City Record, the American Legion and other fraternal and civic organizations who have worked so tirelessly with us this past year, and hope that the same spirit manifests itself throughout the new year just started.

SCHUBERT MELODY AT CURREN THEATER

Franz Schubert died 108 years ago but the wealth of melody which he poured upon the world during his brief career is immortal. Many of these melodies, fresh and ravishingly beautiful today as they were a century ago, will swell through the Curran beginning Monday night, November 18 when the operatta "Blossom Time" opens for its third San Francisco revival.

Producer J. J. Schubert is planning a production of "Blossom Time" which he declares will be the finest ever seen in San Francisco. Special choruses are being trained to sing the Schubert songs and there will be a ballet, beautifully costumed, and a brilliant cast of principals.

The latter will be headed by Robert Schubert, a young tenor who has been a sensational operatta success in the south since being drafted to that field from the radio. Paul Keast, famous in many a Broadway operatta success, will sing the role of Schubert, and Louise Galon, blonde Teutonic prima donna, will sing Mitzi, the inspiration for the timeless music of the young composer.

Schubert, a prolific young genius, wrote at fever heat and poured upon the world a stream of melody lovelier than it has ever heard before or since his time. Among the Schubert gems to be heard in "Blossom Time" are "Serenade," "Hark the Lark," "Ave Maria," and "Moment Musical." Themes from the Unfinished Symphony have been paraphrased by Sigmond Romberg and woven into the score and into the "Song of Love," always one of the hits of the operatta.

DALY CITY AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY

Daly City Unit No. 410, American Legion Auxiliary, will hold its regular meeting next Wednesday evening. All arrangements have been made for the Annual Past Commanders and Past Presidents banquet to be held tomorrow evening in Legion Hall.

Sunday a large delegation of members, the Junior drill team, members of the County Council drill team, attended the Armistice Day celebration in San Mateo. The Unit colors were among the massed colors. The Junior drill team put on an exhibition drill which won loud and long applause from the spectators. We have every reason to be proud of this drill team.

Several members attended the County Council held in Redwood City last Friday night. Plans are under way for an Italian dinner to be held in Burlingame Legion Hall, November 30, by the Council drill team.

All colors, drill teams, drum corps, rifle squads and bands will attend the Eighth District meeting at San Bruno on Sunday, November 24. This will be an all day celebration at which time the new San Bruno Legion Club House will be dedicated. The department commander and other state officers will be present. Dancing will conclude the day's activities.
